Editors

When we were approached by Elsevier to guest edit an issue on Emergency Radiology, our thoughts immediately went to the 2019 Radiologic Clinics of North America issue titled “Trauma and Emergency Radiology,” edited by Stephan W. Anderson, MD from Boston University. Our goal with this current issue was to include topics that are unique and timely but without substantial overlap with the 2019 issue, which is no small feat given the breadth and high quality of material included in the outstanding 2019 issue.

In this issue, we believe that we have assembled an excellent group of highly regarded, leading experts focusing on high-yield and timely topics that are relevant to the practicing emergency radiologist. Herein, we include topics and areas of emerging research that may be new to some radiologists. Topics include multienergy CT in the setting of trauma, the use of enteric contrast in the Emergency Department, intimate partner violence and elder abuse, a head-to-toe review of oncologic emergencies, a panel discussion focused on the challenges of starting an emergency radiology division, wound ballistics for the emergency radiologist, imaging of traumatized pregnant patient, imaging of peripheral vascular trauma, and a multimodality imaging review of soft tissue infections. We certainly hope you enjoy and benefit from this unique collection.

We want to sincerely thank and congratulate the contributing authors for sharing their valuable time and expertise. Last, we would like to thank the staff at Elsevier for their assistance, guidance, and flexibility throughout the development of this issue.
